After 6 years of work and over 7,000 interviews Murray Sinclair and the Truth & Reconciliation Commission of Canada have completed their report. The incredibly painful recollections of seven generations of First Nations people in Canada have been documented. The deceit and cover up of these realities has had horrible consequences for all Canadians. The motivation to destroy First Nations is clear. Their ownership of land stood in the way of progress for corporate interests and governments that cooperated with those interests. This is still a reality today.

The Commission has made recommendations based on the reality of the issues and a deep understanding of what needs to happen to begin the process of healing. This will be a journey of learning and changing our beliefs in historical fabrications for all Canadians. Lets make sure our children know the truth so that we can build an honest and inclusive culture in Canada.

National Pensioners Federation Supports the implementation of the recommendations included in this report.
